"My Son, The President"

INTERVIEW WITH LILLIAN CARTER

EXCERPT:

Q Are people today still trying to get you to intercede for them with the President?

A Oh, yes. I still get a letter from a man in Miami once a week. At first he told me what Jimmy should do and what he shouldn't do. Now he tells me what Jimmy should have done and what he shouldn't have done. So I got tired of that after about the 30th letter. I told him, "If you know so much, why didn't you run for President?" But he still writes me the same thing.

Another man in Los Angeles calls me every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He's angry with Jimmy because there was some man he wanted to be CIA Director. He talks 40 minutes. Now Jimmy came out and appointed Admiral [Stansfield] Turner to head the CIA. That pleased me, and I can't wait until Sunday morning to hear him.

Assassinations

I was deeply disturbed to read your short paragraph on the House investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy [Washington Whispers, February 14 issue].

Although the attitude expressed may be true, it seems to me the purpose of the investigation is being overlooked. The idea is not to "satisfy skeptics," as you phrased it, but to find out the truth behind the somewhat dubious Warren Commission findings and let the American people know what really happened.
